How to Get an FBI Apostille for Spain Digital Nomad Visa: A Simple Step-by-Step Guide

If you are considering working remotely in Spain using the Spain Digital Nomad Visa programme, an important step for your application is the FBI apostille. The apostille authenticates your criminal background check (FBI report) and ensures it is accepted as a legal document in Spain when travelling abroad.

In this guide, we will outline the following information: requirements for obtaining an FBI apostille; obtaining an FBI apostille step-by-step; common obstacles for applicants; and how Globeia can facilitate and streamline the apostille process.

Why an FBI Apostille Is Required for the Spain Digital Nomad Visa

Many countries that sign the Hague Apostille Convention, including Spain, require an apostille seal on certain official documents to authenticate them. Among these documents is the FBI Criminal Background Check.

The Importance of an Apostille

- An apostille is a form of international certification that verifies:
- The authenticity of an FBI Criminal Background Check
- The validity of the signature on the document, and
- The ability of the document to be legally used in Spain.

Without an apostille, the Spanish Consulate or Immigration Authorities refuse to accept your background check, and your visa application may be delayed or rejected.

Step-by-Step: How to Get an FBI Apostille for a Spain Digital Nomad Visa

This guide has complete details on how to go from getting an FBI background check to obtaining the apostille Spain requires you to have with your FBI background check.

1. Obtaining the FBI Background Check (Identity History Summary)

Before you can receive an apostille, you have to acquire an FBI background check, called the identity history summary.

Request a copy through:

- The FBI's official request subpoena
- The FBI's Channeler (This is the preferred method, since it will get you the report much quicker than the FBI's official channel)
- A 3rd party service provider (such as Globeia), who does all of the work for you.

Note: Globeia helps prepare, submit, and track your request with a registered FBI Channeler and saves you headaches and errors.

2. Receive the FBI Background Check

Once the report is complete, you will either receive it digitally or via the mail, based on which method you requested your document from the FBI.

IMPORTANT: Your report must have an "official" signature and be printed on "official" letterhead (45 days) for you to obtain an apostille on the document.

3. Prepare the FBI Background Check for Apostille

Not all copies can be apostilled once you acquire them (unless they are original copies).

To obtain the apostille, the following must be true for the FBI document:

- The report must be an original copy (not a photocopy), not a stamped or signature signature
- The report must have original written signatures or validated digital signatures.

- The report must contain all pages.

An invalid signature or deleted report may cause an additional delay to apostille.

4. The FBI does not provide apostille services; the U.S. Department of State does so.

The FBI does not issue apostilles, the U.S. Department of State (Office of Authentications) uses them for documents that have been authenticated by the FBI.

There are many ways to send your document(s) for an apostille to the Department of State:

- In person (for US residents)
- By mail
- Through a professional (third-party) service such as Globeia

Globeia will take care of the entire process of preparing your submission (including all required forms, fees, courier arrangements, and communication with the Department of State) so that you do not have to do any of the work.

5. You will have to wait while your submission is processed.

The processing time for obtaining an apostille can vary widely. Official apostille applications can take:

- Standard or Normal Service - a few days to several weeks to process; or
- Expedited Service (through a service provider) - usually faster than standard service; however, these times can depend on whether or not you pay for expedited processing.

If you are using a professional service to obtain your apostille, you should also receive tracking updates.

6. Receive Your Apostilled FBI Report

Once your FBI background check has been authenticated and the apostilled document is received, it can be used as proof of your identity, and you may then present the apostilled document to the Spanish authorities as part of your visa application.

Mistakes to Avoid When Getting an Apostille

Even the smallest mistakes can lead to a long delay so avoid the lots of pitfalls below:

- Submitting a report from the FBI that is NOT signed

- Using a photocopy of your original document instead of the actual original document.
- Not including payment for the Apostille
- Not knowing where your document is until it gets to you.

If you use Globeia to help you, the above mistakes are prevented because they have experts reviewing each document prior to it being sent to ensure you have nothing to worry about.
